We are haunted by an ideal life, and it is because we have within us the beginning and the possibility of it.—Phillips Brooks.

A man going shopping with his wife is usually a most weebegone looking object. His face always bears upon it the marks of despair.

Perhaps you have heard of "Spartacus to the Gladiators." Its author, the Rev. Elijah Kellogg, still preaches at Harpswell, Me., although over 80.

A Beverly (Mass.) man was fined $5 for slapping his wife in the face and $15 for assaulting the policeman who arrested him. There seems to be something wrong with the Beverly police court's tariff.

Getting Information in Congress.

Stewart L. Woodford was a member of congress from Brooklyn not long after the war. He was one of the sensible chaps who didn't know it all at the beginning.

For a month or so early in the session he had to spend a great deal of time in the departments, and so he looked around for somebody to keep him headed right on the rare occasions when he appeared in the house.

There was a very shrewd looking person who frequently occupied a seat near by, and Woodford was so struck by his appearance that he got in the habit of asking his advice whenever in doubt about a question.

One day he strolled in during a roll call just before his name was reached. He didn't know what was up, but his unknown friend, as usual, told him how to vote.

When the result was announced, he discovered to his chagrin that he had voted against most of the other members of his party. That worried him a little, but he kept mum, and sure enough a few days later it appeared that he had voted right and that the other fellows were wrong.

Then it occurred to him to find out the name of the far seeing member who always knew about everything and never took any part in debate. So he turned to a friend for information.

"What is his name?" repeated his friend in response to the question. "Why, my dear fellow, he is not a member at all. He is the clerk of the postoffice committee."

Woodford tells this tale himself, so it must be true.—New York Recorder.

AFTER RAIN.

Clouds rifted, seaward drifted like white sails.

A silver rain upon the tangled grasses.

A sweet wind on the mountain where it passes.

We'll follow onward by the lichened rills.

Within the gray, thin shadow of the beeches.

By white pools sleeping in the yellow sun.

On fountain slopes where sparkling shallows run.

Beyond the meadows into piney reaches—

Your hand, dear, so—I'll guide you where the flowers

Are new blown, blue and golden, where the drumming

Of some lone partridge sounds, and brown bees' humming.

Into the silentness of dim bowers.

—H. M. Merrill.

Utilization of Waste.

The discovery that the leaf of the pine-apple plant can be wrought into a serviceable cloth is one of those newly found facts that are constantly proving how much there is yet to discover in nature.

As the plant is extensively grown in Florida a new industry in time will spring up there, and the producers of the delicious pineapple will have a new source of profit at their command. But it does not speak well for the boasted inventive genius of America that pineapple fiber cloth has been manufactured for some time in Central America, and that it is now an article of export.

This is, however, only one of the discoveries made in recent years by which waste material is being utilized. It would puzzle any one but an expert to go into a store to-day and tell from what material a percentage of the goods are manufactured. Grass, timber, sawdust and other products that were once rejected as useless are now saved and put to practical use. The Hollanders have even discovered how to convert the peat from bogs into the soft wools, which can be spun into cloth, rugs and blankets at half the cost these goods can be made from wool grown on the sheep's back. Such a discovery ought to open before Ireland and some other countries the prospect of a great industry which will increase their prosperity and commercial importance.—Philadelphia Press.

To Keep a Boutonniere Fresh.

Carnations, daisies and occasionally half blown rosebuds that have been used as boutonnières in the evening may be kept fresh enough to wear next day. A man in town who has a pardonable penchant for frequently wearing a boutonhole bouquet, yet does not wish to spend from $1.50 to $5 a day on this luxurious fancy, puts away his boutonnières at night as carefully as a woman does her jewels. He makes a hole through a paste-board card, clips the end of the flower and puts it through the hole in the pasteboard. He then puts the card over a glass full of water. The delicate petals of the flower are thus prevented from touching the water, and the stem is in its full length. As everybody knows, water on the petals of cut flowers destroys their freshness. A bunch of carnations may be kept together and their stems put through a sizable hole in the pasteboard card. Daisies should be separated and the stems put through individual holes.—New York Herald.

The Duke of Westminster has spent over a million pounds in rebuilding Eaton hall, which is now considered to rival Chatsworth as England's finest house.

Aim at the Drake

And you are bound to hit some of the ducks. This is precisely the same with Wampole's Tasteless Preparation OF Cod Liver Oil.

It aims to cure Consumption, Hits the Mark, too, and it most effectually breaks up Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness and all Throat and Lung troubles that cause this disease.

It is natural logic to conclude that if WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION OF Cod Liver Oil has power to prevent Consumption, it surely is able to cure these lesser emergencies.

This vigor-making, fat producing preparation is Absolutely Tasteless, in so far as Cod Liver Oil is concerned. All you notice is a delightful flavor of Wild Cherry and Anise.

But the purest Norwegian Cod Liver Oil is there all the same. It is a great blood enricher. Best of all it is a natural food that in its stomachic effects, actually assists its own assimilation.

In Pulmonary or Bronchia troubles it is unequalled. No one doubts the value of Cod Liver Oil, but not every one is able to take it.

WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION removes the nauseous objection and actually makes Cod Liver Oil palatable.
